Surgical Towels

OPIA Huck towels, also often referred to as surgical towels, are 100% cotton, very absorbent, and extremely low lint cloths. They usually have smooth sides, sewn edges and are available in various colors, with blue and green being the most popular. As the name suggests, surgical towels get their name because they are often used during a surgical procedure to drape over a patient. Their low lint quality also makes them the cloth of choice to clean sterilized surgical instruments. Are huck towels durable? These towels are remarkably durable and will last a long time when cared for properly. They can withstand multiple launderings still maintaining their absorbency and softness. After being used in healthcare facilities, they often get a new life as a cleaning cloth. As OPIA, we offer both new and reclaimed huck towels. What's the difference between new and reclaimed or recycled ones? New huck towels are brand new towels, pre-washed, and treated for absorbency. As mentioned above, reclaimed towels often come from hospitals and other healthcare facilities and get a new life as a cleaning cloth. Many cleaning companies prefer reclaimed towels over new ones because they're a budget-friendly option and are already broken in and softer than new ones. These towels can withstand numerous launderings and get softer.
